Medication Assisted Treatment

Creating Healthy Communities
One Person at a Time

– Medication Assisted Treatment –

What is Medication Assisted Treatment?

Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT), combined with counseling, has been shown to be effective in the treatment of opioid disorders. GLRC's MAT Clinic provides medication that can help control cravings and the chemical impacts of substances. Buprenorphine-based medications are now considered best practice for treating individuals with opioid dependence. GLRC believes that when combined with comprehensive evidence-based therapies, a continuum of supportive auxiliary services, and stringent operational controls, medication assisted treatment can be an effective pathway to abstinence, reducing the negative impact of opioid abuse for individuals and the community at large. The target population for this treatment program includes adult clients dealing with moderate to severe Opioid and/or Alcohol Use Disorder. Clients will be thoroughly screened to assess risk and appropriateness for compliance with all program rules and guidelines. Only those patients who can fully comply with the established program components will be accepted for treatment. Although buprenorphine is considered safe for use during pregnancy, this clinic does not specialize in treatment of pregnant women. Pregnant individuals will be referred.

Referrals

GLRC clinicians are able to refer an open, active client for MAT services by completing the MAT referral form. The clinician making the referral sends the form to the access center to start the official screening process. Alternatively, a future MAT client can call GLRC's Access Center to get a referral to one of our many outpatient clinics. The client will then meet with a clinician, begin treatment, and from there is potentially eligible to be referred to the MAT clinic.

Intake

The intake is completed by the MAT nurse/case manager before the client is able to meet with the physician. The nurse/case manager provides a MAT program orientation, reviews the MAT treatment agreement before having the client sign. The nurse/case manager provides an information sheet on what to expect when receiving MAT services to the client. The nurse/case manager then completes the GLRC MAT medical history and PE form with the client in a structured interview. The nurse/case manager will answer any questions about the process that the client may have. A drug of abuse urine screening (10 panel) is completed to be utilized as a baseline. The client then sees the physician who reviews the intake documentation, medical history form, and drug screening results before prescribing medications as indicated. The physician gives the client the GLRC MAT protocol for follow up appointments and determines the client's next appointment frequency.
