Recovery Housing

About Recovery Housing

Recovery housing provides structure and support for those living in recovery and allows a safe environment for individuals to continue to heal from the impacts of addiction. Staff are committed to helping residents gain life skills, make healthy decisions, and strengthen their recovery. Residents attend group meetings, individual counseling, and weekly case management sessions. Often, after completing residential treatment for substance use disorders, clients return to the same living situation that had supported their addiction, and are faced with the same challenges and temptations they had before. While clients have changed during treatment, often times their living environment has not and that can present difficulties for continued success in their recovery journey. This is why recovery housing can be an effective support program in the continuum of care for behavioral health services.
